HUNTSLLE Members of the only reek Orthodo Church in North Alabama will offer authentic, handmade reek pastries at their upcoming event

Holy Cross Saints Constantine and Helen reek Orthodo Church at 021 University rive in Huntsville will host their reek Bake Sale on Nov 1 from 10 am to 2 pm The sale provides North Alabama residents with a chance to buy reek pastries for the holidays

This congregation consists of numerous branches of the Orthodo religion We have families from Romania, eorgia, Russia, Malta, Ethiopia, Thailand and many more, publicist and Philoptochos charity president Sula Mulligan said Event chairpersons are Elaine Taras, Popi Missios and Helena enofos

Organiers recommend placing orders in advance, because items sell out uickly To order, call 25 5 221 or visit greekbakesalenet

However, people are encouraged to visit the sale and to meet Father evin Milsaps, tour the church and ask uestions about this religion in eistence for over 2,000 years, Mulligan said Pastries also will be sold at the event

World famous baklava is popular with its layers of phyllo dough, walnuts, spices, butter and steeped in traditional syrup for a pastry that is heavenly, Mulligan said Honey and nut melomakarona cookies are topped with walnuts

My personal favorite, Tyropitakia, is a blend of four cheeses wrapped in phyllo dough formed into triangles and ecellent for appetiers, Mulligan said Our reek bread is truly a work of art Each loaf is lovingly hand braided, brushed with an egg wash and baked to perfection

reek Orthodo and Catholicism were once one religion We are a Christian religion similar to Catholicism, including baptism, communion and the Lord s Prayer, Mulligan said

Proceeds will support church ministries and Huntsville area organiations, like their prison outreach program and youth group Philoptochos uses proceeds to prepare meals for The Salvation Army, sack lunches for the homeless, hand sewn blankets for the hospital and help to other charities
